Editorial

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times" or (if you prefer) "The times, they are achanging'. Either way, Dickens or Dylan, take your pick. We've all been there before. And while unsettling events swirl around us, may I suggest we all just concentrate on the present moment and events closer to home.

And on that note, do consider coming to this month's Annual Parish Meeting on May 27th. If local, national and international politics are fraught, and you're drowning in campaign flyers, then we can all at least have a say in things here in Kingston that are important too, but non-party political. And there will be refreshments!

Hope you all had a happy and meaningful Easter. Once again the flower rota people did a beautiful job of decorating the church. Do pop in and take a look if you have the time.

Vicar's Letter: As time goes by

The weather in March was unusually dry and sunny. It reminded me of those weeks in the first COVID lockdown of 2020; which was relatively nice for us living in rural communities and horrendous for others living alone and isolated or in high-rise blocks of flats with young children unable to go outside.

As I write world leaders are using phrases such as 'The world as we knew it has been changed …' They are responding, currently, to the imposition of trade tariffs by Donald Trump in his role as President of the USA. It is another reminder of the fragility of normal life as we prefer to know or endure it. In the way that COVID was a global issue and risk, now even penguins and seals on a group of uninhabited islands in the middle of nowhere seem to be victims of the latest economic shaking and uncertainties!

I suspect one of the impacts of COVID is we may feel slightly less unnerved by the latest global slumps in the various trading blocks around the world. We have managed to come through a recent depression, we have seen stocks and shares rise and fall previously and we are alert (often with the help of social media) to rapidly changing events and disasters erupting around the world. The danger is we become inoculated against the pain or try to deny it will affect us.

One surprise I came across recently are various reports indicating there is a rise in churchgoing and exploration of faith matters among the Gen Z – young people born between 1997 and 2012. As a grandparent that interests me as much as being involved in church leadership. Locally there are similar signs of new shoots and real church growth. One of the churches in the Papworth Team has seen its average church attendance triple in the past decade. That the story is not the same everywhere can be tough to bear and be part of, yet it also reminds us, in the words of Scripture, to "weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who rejoice." God has not given up on us and neither have people given up on God!

A question for me goes like this: 'How can I/we remain at ease when all around us are losing it?' It can be important when the phone rings telling you a close relative has had a fall or is suddenly dangerously ill, with the person on the other end of the call clearly hysterical. It can be the issue when a job is terminated unexpectedly with the prospect of unemployment feeling bleak and that's before you go home and tell the family what has happened.

One thing I have tried to assimilate is from Scripture (Romans 8 v 28), we read: 'All things work together for good to those who love God and are called according to his purposes.' This does not tell me God is to be blamed for everything that unfolds but He can and does (often mysteriously) work with how we react to the unforeseen when we keep our trust in His goodness and love.

EASTER SUNDAY April 20th

The Easter Sunday service was very well attended this year. We record our thanks to the Rev'd Bill Warren – recently retired from London to Ely and now one of the cathedral's Priest Vicars – for officiating; to all those who gave and arranged the flowers; to Lee Steele for the Easter eggs; and to Patrick Dailly for playing the Clavinova. And, above all, to all who came here, from near or far, to celebrate the great Feast of the Resurrection.

Annual Church Meetings 2025, 23rd April

At the Annual Meeting of Parishioners there were no nominations for the two posts of churchwarden again this year.

At the Annual Parochial Church Meeting Peter Reynolds was re-elected Secretary and Jane Coutts Treasurer. PCC numbers were boosted this year with the following elections: Christine Allison, Janet Clear, Monica O'Donnell, Linda Rimmer and Lee Steele. The Rev'd Nigel Pearson remains our Chairman and first clergy contact for Kingston.

Kay Forsythe did not stand for re-election: we are greatly indebted to her for her commitment and services to the church over the last seven or eight years as a PCC member, a Churchwarden and Treasurer, whilst living in Kingston, the USA and in Cambridge (!). We are very glad that she intends to continue to worship here and to join us for events.

Many thanks to Henrietta Burbridge for joining the church cleaning team.

There has been an application for the vacant post of Papworth Team Rector: let's hope we can report positive news on this next month.

The concerts in church planned for April, May and June have been cancelled with regret, but there should be at least two later in the year.

Femke Cole has set up a village WhatsApp group!

This group is open for anyone in Kingston to join (completely optional) and can be used by anyone to post a message on anything like power cut updates, social events, hare coursing prevention, northern light sightings, etcetera.

We are pleased to hear of the following achievement of a local resident.
Well done Jane.

As many residents may know, I have always been a keen animal advocate and worked in animal rescue and veterinary hospital for over 20yrs in total and have always been interested in animal behaviour and supporting pet owners. Over the last two years, I have been studying with COAPE International who believe in a compassionate, science-based approach to animal behaviour, wellbeing and welfare. Their ethos is grounded in two fundamental principles: Emotions First and Do No Harm, and I'm pleased to say that I graduated (with distinction) and am now a fully qualified animal behaviour therapist.

The Man Who Painted His House

Discover the story of David Parr, a Cambridge-born, working-class Victorian artist who transformed his ordinary terraced house into an extraordinary hand-painted home.

In 1886 Parr, who worked for the Cambridge decorating firm F. R. Leach & Sons which was active in the Victorian Arts and Crafts Movement and associated with designers such as William Morris, bought a modest terraced house in Cambridge. Over the next 40 years, in his spare time, he meticulously decorated the interior with hand-painted Arts and Crafts schemes and adapted the space to suit his family. Preserved by the family for generations, the house became publicly accessible when the David Parr House charity was established in 2014. It now offers a rare glimpse into the life and work of a skilled artworkman.

A new short film The Man Who Painted His House, produced by Dr Victoria Mills and directed by Lily Ford in collaboration with David Parr House, explores Parr's home, personal motivations and working life through archival material and contemporary footage.

The Man Who Painted His House will be screening on 20th May 2025 at 7.30pm at All Saints' Church, Jesus Lane, Cambridge, CB5 8BP.

THE CAMBRIDGESHIRE COTTAGE IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

In my article on Kingston in the 1891 Census I touched briefly on the work of the Cambridgeshire Cottage Improvement Society (now the Cambridgeshire Cottage Housing Society). Since then, I have obtained a copy of Houses of the Humbler Sort by Peter Soar, which is a brief history of the first 50 years of the Society from its founding in 1938. This book goes into some detail of its work in Kingston, which was one of the first villages where it acquired cottages.

The founder was W P Baker, a Cambridge graduate, who became active in the Council for the Protection of Rural England, the Cambridgeshire Rural Community Council and the Cambridge Preservation Society. His work with these organisations led to a lifetime's passion for not only preserving old cottages but improving the standard of living of the occupants. He founded the Society in 1938, first having purchased cottages in Barrington, Toft and Kingston, some with his own money. Ownership was what marked out the Society from similar organisations who were more concerned with simply preserving old buildings. With actual ownership came the tenants whose cottages were refurbished for only modest and affordable increases in rent. Baker also had a constant battle with council surveyors who were intent on demolishing some of the cottages he was determined to save. Many of the old cottages at Grantchester were saved from demolition because the wealthier members of the village, anxious to preserve its character, were generous patrons of the Society

The records of the Society provide an insight into the grim interiors of these cottages.

Grantchester: Cottage number 5. Rent 5/6d on Mondays. Rain comes through roof. Brickwork on floor loose and dangerous. Roof timbers rotten at corner. Stair treads dangerous and broken.

Fen Drayton: The roof had been left open and Mrs Culpen inside suffering from the cold (Mr Culpen has been poorly) cannot use the bedroom upstairs: also rain and snow would settle the fate of the plaster ceiling. But these people are very helpless, as she complained of the draught in the living room, coming from the passageway, the roof of which has always been ruined. It never seemed to occur to her to get her able-bodied daughter to nail up the sacking that was hanging loose against the studding.

Fen Drayton: The larger part of the old house reeked with damp, decay and rats, and the burning open range in the sitting room only accentuated the fog without.

Throughout these archives there is frequent reference to sacking being used to stop draughts from broken windows, ill fitting doors and holes in the wall. Up until the 1950s the improvement work was rudimentary, involving little more than repairing brick floors, windows and roofs, providing a cold tap over a sink and refurbishing earth closets.

In the spring of 1938 Mr Baker purchased Shingled and Elizabeth Cottages, opposite the church, for £80 the pair. After he had transferred them to the Society a Council grant of £77 was received for their refurbishment. The first task was to repair the leaking pantiled and thatched roofs.

This is what the records say of these two cottages, which were seemingly three homes, giving us a glimpse of life in Kingston in 1938: There is the famous Mrs N. whose parents had died there. Mrs N. is a very good gardener. Next door is an old schoolteacher who was everyone's pet but lately became extremely difficult. The tenant of the next-door cottage looks after her by way of seeing her fire is out at night as they are all terrified for the thatch. Next door a nice young couple with a small child. In the rear cottage three generations are living. All these people were, and are connected with the land. The son-in-law looks after his own earth closet and the old lady's, although these are a long way from the cottage.

It is recorded that after the war one old lady there did not want electricity put in because she claimed the oil lamps kept her warm. By 1978 the Society was barely solvent and sold off a plot of its Kingston land to the builder of Walnut Cottage.

The architect who oversaw the early renovations of the Kingston cottages was Theodore Fyfe, a Scot who had spent four years as the site architect to Sir Arthur Evans's excavation of the Minoan Palace at Knossos. His wife ran a school at Longstowe Hall, where Fyfe tragically drowned in 1946 while skating on a frozen lake.

A total of 46 Cambridgeshire cottages were saved by the Society. One they did not purchase in Kingston, that was demolished after the war, stood on the site of Foxcote (the Ginn's bungalow) next to the Old Chapel. There is a surviving photo from the 1930s of this good-sized cottage, with upstairs rooms, that would probably be worth close to £1 million pounds today and definitely listed.

By the early 1980s the Society was struggling financially to renovate its properties, as tenants now required baths, fitted kitchens, electric wiring, heating and damp proofing. A change of direction was needed, and the Society became The Cambridgeshire Cottage Housing Society, building on its land at Fen Drayton where five new cottages were opened by the Princess Royal. Other land was developed, and the Society also took over new buildings from local authorities. In 2022 it merged with the English Rural Housing Association Group, bringing with it 62 homes, including some Grade II listed properties, identified by the Society's terracotta plaque.

Big Garden Birdwatch

Thank you to everyone who took part in Big Garden Birdwatch 2025. Over half a million people across the UK counted 9.1 million birds. The top 10 birds in England were House Sparrow, Blue Tit, Woodpigeon, Starling, Blackbird, Robin, Great Tit, Goldfinch, Magpie, and Long-tailed Tit. Full results are at https://www.rspb.org.uk/whats-happening/big-garden-birdwatch/results

Although there have been increases in some areas over the last decade, bird numbers dropped across the board and House Sparrows remain on the Red List. Greenfinches were added to the UK Red List in 2021, however, the decline appears to have slowed over recent years. Goldfinch numbers have risen in recent decades but fewer starlings than ever were spotted, raising fears for their numbers.

The RSPB recommends cutting lawns less often, and avoiding pesticides, which reduce the number of insects to eat and can poison birds. Starlings like feeding on short grass, so mowing the lawn occasionally is beneficial to them. Wildflowers for pollinators, such as dandelion and clover, allow birds to forage for invertebrates.
